To Kevin Gordon -

If AFD technology has been agreed in the past – why is EDF choosing to ignore the eco system to save fish stocks and forge ahead with the devastation of our environment and future fish stocks.

Why must you accept your decision on saving finance in going forward with this terrible mistake.

We have wintering bird wildlife which survives on the food in the waters of the estuary which we cannot afford to lose due to a financial shortfall within EDF . Our human habitat will suffer along with the wintering birds that need the food to survive.

The decisions made now will reflect in years to come as the mistakes made by EDF will last a long long due to decline in fish stocks, birds and other species.

Yours – Sue Willis
